

MOTHER AND FATHER
HEAR STORY OF HOW BRIDE MET DEATH

Listen to Inquests Held to Determine Responsibility
For Fatal Crash

THREE WERE KILLED

Couple Were Being Driven On Honeymoon by Friend at Time of Accident

A father and mother yesterday afternoon sat for two and one-half hours and listened to a recital of the manner in which their daughter and her husband of but a few hours, along with a friend, met death in an automobile crash on the Lincoln Highway, half-mile north of South Langhorne.

The accident occurred on the evening of April 5th, as the newly-wedded couple was being driven by a friend on their honeymoon. They were en route from New York to Philadelphia, and their identity was learned when Deputy Coroner Dr. James P. Lawler discovered a marriage certificate among the personal belongings of the bride.

Those who were the victims of the accident were Ruth Isabella Beebe Nolan and Arthur Nolan, both of New York, and the third victim was George Kapp, driver of the car. Nolan and his bride occupied the rear seat.

Bucks county coroner, Dr. H. Clayton Moyer, assisted by deputy coroner, Dr. James P. Lawler, conducted the inquisitions into the deaths of the three in the municipal building, here, yesterday afternoon. First an inquest was held to determine how George Kapp came to his death. A number of witnesses were questioned and then the case was given to the coroner's jury. The verdict was returned that the accident was unavoidable and the two defendants, Samuel Wells, colored, Princeton, N. J.; and Emil Calia, Bridgeport, Conn., were both exonerated, as they were in each of the other two cases.

The same witnesses were called in the inquest into the deaths of Arthur D. Nolan and his bride, Ruth Isabella Beebe Nolan. The witnesses gave the same testimony in each case with the exception of Dr. Lawler, who described the cause of death of each of the victims.

The testimony was to the effect that the car driven by Kapp suddenly loomed from behind a truck, darted across the Lincoln Highway, sideswiping the machine operated by Samuel Wells, and then crashing into a truck-trailer operated by Emil Calia. None of those in the Wells car or the driver of the truck were injured.

Mr. and Mrs. John Beebe, parents of Ruth Isabella Beebe Nolan, the bride who had been married just a few hours before, sat and listened intently to the evidence. Mrs. Beebe was visibly affected and frequently dried her tears as some of the gruesome details of the accident were brought out. Especially was Mrs. Beebe affected when Dr. Lawler told how the young woman was not identified until, at a nearby garage, in searching her personal effects, he discovered the little white book containing the marriage license.

The inquest lasted from 3.30 until six o'clock, and the following were the witnesses: Dr. James P. Lawler, Corporal R. D. Evans, state highway patrol, and Patrolman Carfagno, Oxford Valley barracks; Julius Bednar and Frank C. Austin, This'll Do Inn, South Langhorne; Amanda Jurious and Andrew Jurious, East Riverdale, Md.; Samuel Wells, Princeton, N. J.; and Emil Calia, Bridgeport, Conn.

The coroner's jury was composed of: Evan Vandegrift, Damon Johnson, Clarence G. Young, Edward Dougherty, Frank Londerbough and William R. Sine.

Trenton Coopperage Plant
Destroyed By Blaze

TRENTON, N. J., Apr. 17.—A three-alarm fire early this morning destroyed the huge plant of the Muehlausen Coopperage of Trenton, 1545 New York avenue, just over the city line in Lawrence Township. The loss is estimated at approximately $150,000.

The plant was two stories, 150 by 200 feet, and contained thousands of barrels in course of construction and seasoned staves being cured for the making of various sized barrels.

Fire companies from surrounding territory were summoned to the scene when it was thought that the flames would ignite other nearby plants.

The plant was operating nights and three employees who were at work were scarcely able to leave the building when flames swept through the second floor where they were engaged at work.

"FAVORITE" ELECTION RIVALS GREAT RACE; WEE TOTS' EVENT ENDS IN 1 WEEK

The handsome loving cup that will be awarded to the winner of the community-wide baby election next Saturday, April 24th, is on display in Election Headquarters and has drawn wide attention and many complimentary comments.

It is only one of the evidences of recognition that will go with the great honor of being declared Bucks county's favorite baby.

See the loving cup today, then resolve to have your baby win it. Only a few precious days remain.

Rivaling the world-renowned Kentucky Derby for intensity of competition the Favorite Baby Election, being sponsored by The Courier and many of the community's progressive merchants, is in next to the last week with today's issue with votes flying fast and hopes riding high.

In the stirrups are the best and most lovable babies and in the judges' stand are the citizens of the entire community. The spectators include every baby lover of this entire section.

"A Shower of Cash" in the form of substantial bank accounts and liberal cash percentages awaits the favorites. Scores of babies in return for the work done in their behalf by their supporters will receive cash awards by a fixed plan and in proportion to the amount in subscription payments credited to them. All awards will be made by The Courier and it is hoped that every baby in the list will receive either a regular award or a substantial check from this newspaper.

Extra Cash Offered
An extra cash prize of $100 will be awarded the baby for whom the most votes are cast this week. This added prize will be given in ADDITION to any other award the baby receives. Both merchant coupons and subscription votes count.

Since only the votes turned in THIS WEEK apply on the EXTRA CASH PRIZE, each baby in the list has EXACTLY the same opportunity to win it, regardless of how many or how few he or she may have up to the present time.

Do Your Shopping Now and Get Baby Votes
"Buy now what you'll need later on," has become a byword and a campaign slogan among the followers of practically every baby in this section.

Merchants of the community who are co-operating with The Courier in the election, report that citizens are flocking into their places in greater numbers each day with demands for "baby votes" upon their purchases.

More cash business has been done in the co-operating stores during the election than had been done here in a like period in many months previous to its inauguration, some merchants report. Direct credit to the babies of the community in their quest for votes is given almost unanimously.

Today marks the end of the most thrilling week of the entire campaign. There have been numerous upsets and others are bound to occur. Some have girded themselves with renewed energy for the final effort. Only a few have dropped by the wayside, unable to continue the rapid pace which is marking the course of the leading candidates.

But, though this week has been a torrid one in the campaign, to use an old expression, "You ain't seen nothing yet." The week ahead is figuratively and literally the home stretch, and the winner may now only be in the first 30 in the standings or, in fact, even further down in the list.

Which goes to show that the winner's share of the purse, the crown of glory, the loving cup, the $500.00 bank account, will be won during the coming week, though the work done thus far is going to count greatly.

Rally your organization behind you today and quicken their interests in the "Buy at Home" idea. Patronize the stores that want to see a representative baby crowned, and do your utmost for The Courier, which has been a dominant force in the election.

TRIPLE VOTES or THREE TIMES THE REGULAR amount will be credited ALL MERCHANT COUPONS and ALL SUBSCRIPTIONS turned in to-night.

REV. GAILEY ASSUMES
DUTIES AT CHURCH HERE

To Preach at Morning Service
In Bristol Presbyterian Church Tomorrow

NOW A RESIDENT HERE

The Rev. James R. Gailey, who has accepted the pastorate of the Bristol Presbyterian Church, assumed his duties Thursday.

The Rev. and Mrs. Gailey and their daughter, Clara Ellen, changed their residence from Smyrna, Delaware, to the Presbyterian manse, here, on Wednesday.

The first sermon during his pastorate here will be delivered by the Rev. Gailey tomorrow morning.

A native of York County, Pennsylvania, where he attended the public schools, the Rev. Gailey moved to Wilmington, Del., in 1925. In 1930 he received a degree of Bachelor of Arts at the University of Delaware; and the degree of Bachelor of Theology was conferred upon him in 1933 at Princeton Seminary, N. J. For the past four years he has been in charge of the Presbyterian Church at Smyrna, Del.

The minister, who succeeds the Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton as pastor of the Bristol Presbyterian Church, delivered a sermon to the local congregation last month. Since November 1st, the time of the resignation of the Rev. Knowlton, who has assumed the pastorate of a church at Sharon Hill, the services at the Bristol church have been in charge of a stated supply, the Rev. William Yeomans.

Installation services for the Rev. Gailey will occur on May 11th at eight p. m., following an all-day meeting of the Presbytery of Philadelphia North, in the Presbyterian Church, here. The moderator of the Presbytery will install the new pastor.

The work of this pastor in Smyrna was most outstanding. When he assumed pastorate at Smyrna four years ago, the membership was 70, and this number has since risen to 110. The average attendance when the Rev. Gailey first went to Smyrna was 12 to 15, and when he was called here, the attendance had reached an average of 50 to 70. Eight new members formed the largest class of accessions during the past 10 years, this class being admitted on Sunday last.

During the ministry of the Rev. Gailey at Smyrna, extensive renovations were made to the church and manse.

The Rev. Gailey, in leaving the Smyrna church, also resigned as ministerial superintendent of the Delaware State Christian Endeavor Union. He has also been working under the Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. A., as chairman of the Summer conference at West Nottingham Academy at Coloma, Maryland.

MUDDLED EUROPEAN SITUATION TOLD OF
BY DR. M. DORIZAS

World Traveler, Speaking of Communism, Says "Darned Thing Doesn't Work"

TRAVEL CLUB SPEAKER

Divides World's Foremost Countries Into "Hayes"
and "Have-Nots"

In addressing The Travel Club members yesterday afternoon, Dr. Michail M. Dorizas, of the University of Pennsylvania, world traveler and linguist, spoke about "The Muddled European Situation," then continued his discourse by telling of various aspects of the world situation in general.

Giving attention to Communism, what it is, and how the doctrine has spread, Dr. Dorizas impressed most forcibly upon his audience that "The darn thing doesn't work."

Introduced by Mrs. Joseph Smith, who arranged the program, the speaker's athletic career at the University of Pennsylvania in earlier years, was mentioned. "There are few places in the world that Dr. Dorizas has not visited," added Mrs. Smith, in telling of his activities. "And to whatever countries he goes, he is received by diplomats. Therefore he brings us information of the countries of the world first-hand. He represented us at the Versailles Conference, and was then sent to Assyria and Palestine in the interests of the United States."

"I will attempt to tell all sides of the questions we will consider," informed the speaker as he commenced his informative and interesting address. "We will try to unravel this muddled situation in Europe, and to find the reason for such conditions." Mentioning three countries, Italy, Germany and Japan, the similarities were shown, each having tremendous populations, small areas and few resources. "These are the 'Have-Nots' was the name applied. Turning thoughts to Soviet Russia, England, France and the United States, the native of Greece told of the tremendous acreages and great resources, they being named the "Hayes."

"So we have the 'Hayes' and the 'Have-Nots,' and a tremendous strife is going on." The similarity in the types of governments in the "Have-Not" countries was pointed out. "The whole thing is about like this: There are two pieces of bread; several go after those two pieces of bread, and there is trouble."

The Italo-Ethiopian question came in for lengthy discussion. "Mussolini thought that Italic Selassie would stay in Ethiopia and become the policeman, and when Italic Selassie left there was another problem for Italy. The topography of the three countries of Germany, Italy and Japan was considered; a large part of Italy being mountainous; a great portion of the soil of Germany being poor, with pine trees which can live very cheaply, being grown; while Japan, the Imperialist, has territory smaller than the state of California, with a very small section being level. "The population grows, but the land does not," added the student of world affairs. "These three countries tell the world and tell themselves that 'Unless we expand we will explode.' That's why they are all 'goose-stepping' to the command of their leaders."

Forty per cent of the soil of Russia was described as being frozen to a depth of six feet. "And in 15 per cent of the area of Russia we find there is located 86 per cent of the population. Russia has great resources, but they are undeveloped."

Each country that is in the world spotlight today, was referred to, and something of her resources, her needs, her activities told of by this one who has travelled extensively throughout the world, and who each year visits Europe.

LURE OF UNKNOWN

Wanderlust is wonderlust. Lust for strange roads is lust for the unknown things to be seen along them and at their ends. Individuals of all ages and all generations have known it—have felt it dragging them from the beaten tracks to trails that lead into uncharted regions. Some will return. Some do, in rags, broken, worn, weary, with stories of monsters and evil things encountered and with wondrous tales of good things found and with evidence that bears them out. Thus do the terrors and treasures of the unknown become evident.

Sometimes the lust gets into the feet and pulls its victims along strange paths toward wondrous places, new lands, unexplored wastes. Sometimes it gets into the mind and leads toward strange theories and after strange objectives, some of them real, some chimerical, some of them good, some bad. Sometimes the lure of the unknown draws toward strange political, moral, social, economic or metaphysical "isms"—some of which prove sound and safe, but most of them unsound and deadly dangerous. Sometimes it gets into youth and tempts it toward odd moral conceits and fancies—some destructive. Many wanderers perish on their journeys along strange mental lines. Others return, sadder and wiser.

A large number of grown-up "ism" flasers are today wandering after strange notions. And many of the younger generation are in pursuit of strange fancies that may come true, hunting new pleasure by new paths into new haunts. May all return as hopeful and confident as they set forth.

YU KIN SPEL IT "KAT"

Spelling drills for children are a waste of time unless the bright young spellers intend to become stenographers, newspaper reporters or compilers of dictionaries, says Prof. Jane Dorsey Zimmerman of Teachers College, Columbia University. Some reporter may interrupt to ask what a copy desk is for, anyhow; but let that pass. The point is that Prof. Zimmerman must think spelling amounts to much nowadays.

"Pronunciation is far more important than spelling because conversation is at present the chief means of communication between people," she asserts. "It is rare nowadays that any one has occasion to write anything except his signature or a telephone number. Instead of writing letters, most people phone or hop into a cab to see their friends. In my opinion, we should drum spelling into the few people who need to know it and let the others pass their time in learning pronunciation. The average child, despite countless hours of oral spelling drill persists in spelling many everyday words as they are pronounced, not as the dictionary says they should be spelled. It doesn't matter, after all, whether he spells cat with a 'c' or a 'k'."

We fail to see where a child gains anything by spelling cat with a 'k'. Kat is just as long a word as cat and just as much trouble to write or spell. The advantages, if any, of misspelling seem to us to be in the labor-saving line. But why waste time arguing about that? Prof. Zimmerman sez it dunzn't do yu eny gud to no how to spel.

Add Great Minds at Work: "Women," says a famed New York educator, "must learn to speak for themselves."

Muddled European Situation Told Of By Dr. M. Dorizas

The possessions of France were described as being great, and the women were reminded of the fact that Great Britain governs one-fourth of the area of the world.

"We ought to be glad that the Atlantic Ocean separates us from Europe, and that the Pacific is to our West."

The United States, the speaker informed, has one-fourth of the value of the production of the world. "Thus 1-18th of the population of the world produces and enjoys one-fourth of the world's goods." The desire of this country for peace and happiness was mentioned, "even if we are not members of the League of Nations. We find that while the three 'Have-Nots' countries were in swaddling clothes the rest gobbled up the world."

Much time was given to considering the Spanish question, where the "land-owners had so much, and thousands in the poorer classes hadn't a square foot of ground, and lived in abject poverty. We find that the Spanish army had three times as many officers as the French army, and the Spanish fleet had the same number of admirals as the British Navy. The rich in Spain had been 'breaking windows' of the poor for 500 years, and when you 'break windows' you pay for them. They are being paid for now... King Alfonso saw the handwriting on the wall, and left. Then there was a glorious Republican Spain, with no Republicans. Professors were put into many jobs, but they were not practical men." The mistake of giving the vote to everybody in Spain was told of, in spite of the fact that many were illiterate. The manner in which the various parties in Spain advanced and operated was spoken of, and the inroads of Communism there given much attention.

"We find conditions there terrible. Thousands were shot behind the lines. The rich controlled everything, the poor had nothing. The Communists are very busy all over the world."

The three movements in the world today, Democracy, Fascism and Communism, were spoken of at length by Dr. Dorizas. "Neither Fascism or Communism are any good. They permit no freedom of speech, and have many faults... But we must remember that Communists don't bring on the things we have considered. The conditions are there; the ground is already ploughed. Then is when the Communists come in." The objects of the Communists were spoken of, and Communism in general described. "But the darn thing doesn't work," he added. "Communism would abolish class, but to abolish class you must abolish the family."

The Scandinavian countries, Denmark, Finland and Sweden, were referred to as free of such difficulties. "These countries have made it impossible to profiteer on goods." The lack of unemployment in those countries was spoken of. "They have nothing to fear. But in Spain and Russia, 10 per cent had everything, and 90 per cent had nothing. Thus there was trouble. There was a field for Communism to work in."

Business was transacted after the address of the afternoon, with Mrs. John J. Willaman occupying the chair. Mrs. Willaman called attention to the state convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in Philadelphia; and the county federation at Buckingham on April 30th.

Mrs. Franklin Wallin mentioned the fashion show and card party of the Junior Travel Club to be conducted on Thursday evening next in the club home. The Garden Center Day on Tuesday at a Philadelphia department store was mentioned by Mrs. Elwood Goslin.

The club members were informed by Mrs. Frank Lehman that splendid response was made locally to the drive for members for the Women's Field Army for Control of Cancer. Thirty-one Travel Club members affiliated, and 23 other localities. Mrs. Horace H. Burton called attention of the members to the fact that many of the trees planted at Washington Crossing Park a few years ago, and dedicated in a special service by the county federation, had died. Action will be sought to replace the same.

Officers elected yesterday are as follows: President, Mrs. Earl Tomb; vice president, Mrs. Roy Tracy; recording secretary, Mrs. Harry Neher; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Richard T. Myers; treasurer, Mrs. Thomas G. Hawkes.

"Rich Cargoes" by Henry C. Rowland

CHAPTER XVI

"Do you know anything about the Colonel's affairs?" asked Sandy. "Not that it matters much as I can guarantee you freedom from want."

"His last will is in the safe, in his office here. I don't really know what it contains. It's heavily sealed and thumb marked on the wax, Oriental fashion. He said he would not trust it with a living soul. In any case they're pretty sure to attack it."

"On what grounds?" Sandy asked.

"Eccentricity. Brain softening. Proven vagaries. My undue influence. Worse maybe." Isobel looked worried.

"Oh, no. Impossible," Sandy protested. "Not that low."

Isobel raised her shoulders slightly. "There's no limit to the meanness of family greed. I've an idea that Uncle's enormously rich. A man who was very close to him, the one who first told me of his mannerism when intensely nervous hinted as much. Into the millions—of pounds. You go, Sandy, and hurry back."

That night at dinner, Sandy made his announcement. It burst like a rocket but the cries of rapture did not ring true. Only the Colonel seemed heartily and sincerely pleased.

Vinckers, Sandy observed, looked sick, but he quickly rallied, managed to say the proper things. It struck Sandy then that there might be more than sordid motive, money greed to bring Vinckers there. A man does not look as if he were left aboard a sinking ship merely because the heiress apparent of his father-in-law announces her engagement to be married.

Was it possible, Sandy wondered, that Vinckers was as much in love with Isobel as is possible for a man of such gross fibre to be? And all his fibre was not gross. There was the soul of the artist to reckon with, this finer quality woven into the warp and woof of the robust material texture of the man.

He asked later of Isobel. "Is Vinckers in love with you?"

"You saw his face?"

"Then I'll not go," Sandy said. "I'll stick on."

"You can go safely enough, old dear. There's nothing he can do. Unless it's to shoot himself. And he's got our permission to do that."

So Sandy slipped out at midnight on his yacht and from the financial angle it was well that he did for he managed to stave off a lawsuit impending, get it shoved back on the calendar until his more important witnesses might arrive from Japan. This cost him about a thousand dollars in cables which was nothing and an extra day waiting for replies which was nerve racking.

He returned to find the island in that state of suffocating breathlessness that precedes some violent cataclysm, earthquake, volcano, tornado or the falling of a scourge, a new and unknown pestilence striking silently from the void.

The Colonel had disappeared. Vanished into thin air. Isobel tensely gave him the brief and comprehensive details so far as they were known.

That afternoon at the hour of siesta Colonel Carlton had evidently taken it into his whimsical mind to go for a ramble alone on Mouse. At luncheon he had boasted his qualities of mahout, a perfect understanding with the big beast. But nobody had guessed at the possibility of an attempt to demonstrate them.

Mike had been given the afternoon off to go with the white overseer and the labor gang in a big working launch around the point to the head of a bay to prospect for cement gravel that might be used where the cement work is above but not under salt water, where it is apt to erode.

The Colonel like a boy on a lark had slipped down to Mouse's barrack, mounted the elephant and gone off alone riding mahout fashion with his knees under the elephant's ears.

According to the natives the big beast had moved away with the utmost docility evidently as pleased as the Colonel with the little romp, like a boy and his dog. He had been last seen swinging out through the farthest cane patch, Mouse regaling himself as he lumbered on his way.

The weather was lovely, a fresh breeze from the sea and the Colonel wearing his big pith helmet. Two hours later Mouse had come shambling back with every symptom of worry and disquiet. He went hunting for Mike, who had not returned, utterly ignoring everybody else.

Isobel herself had chained him up not liking his manner when Vinckers approached. Jarvis was afraid of the elephant. At Vinckers' suggestion they had ordered ponies and with Sambo afoot as shikharri, had followed the elephant's trail for about three miles to a little cove under some bluffs on the other side of the island from that where the labor party had gone.

Here the tracks showed that the Colonel had dismounted and gone down on the beach, to the water's edge. Its slope was very gradual and as the tide was by this time at full flood their investigations were limited.

"He liked to bathe," Isobel said. "He may have been hot from the ride and decided to get down and take a dip. Then if he had met with an accident in the water, a stroke or heart attack an eddy of the current could have carried him out."

"What about his clothes?"

"There were some low coral ledges bare at ebb tide. If he had flung them down on these, they would have drifted out. The breeze was off the shore. There was not a sign, no trace, no boat in sight except some speargers or fishermen far out," Isobel told him.

In the face of such a tragedy there seemed nothing at all to do except to order the beach patrolled for sign of the Colonel's body. Isobel's premonition about to some extent Sandy's had revealed themselves.

Her grief was acute but restrained. Sandy thought the possibility of the Colonel's being inspired by some mad prank to hide out and see what happened but dismissed this instantly senseless. Her uncle would not expose Isobel to such needless suffering. There could be but a single explanation. The physical effort of riding as mahout had anticipated, had heated and wearied him and made a bath attractive. Then in the water he had suffered a collapse and the wind and tide had obliterated all traces, as winds and tides have always done.

It was infinitely pathetic. Here was this fair island on which so much work had been done and planned. Would it relapse into its former state? Worst of all for Sandy it had been his doing. He was the direct cause of the tragedy. All that he could do was to hold Isobel close and murmur brokenly his contrition, and she to comfort him.

"He was happy to the last, Sandy. It was unthinkable for him to ride off like that. Incompatible with his dignity and he held that very high.

Sudden impulse and to make good his claim at luncheon. Like a grandfather who insists on showing his little grandson that he can ride his bicycle and then gets a spill."

Sandy went aboard his yacht that night so overcome with grief and self reproach as almost to forget the happiness that faced him. Then after a restless night he had just fallen into a real sleep when there came a commotion on deck.

Heavy footsteps came down the hatch and Sandy turned in his bunk to see Vinckers staring at him wild-ly.

"Isobel's gone," he said.

"What—what's that you say?"

"Isobel's gone. Vanished. Disappeared. There's a curse on this damned island."

Sandy struggled up, mind whirling, heart thumping without force. "But she can't be far."

"She hasn't been to bed. I turned in early, worn down by what had happened. Hester woke me an hour ago to say that Isobel's maid Martha had come to say she couldn't find her. The premises around the house have been searched. All the boats are absent or accounted for. She hasn't been aboard the cruiser. Could this thing have turned her head?"

"No. It's too strong. She's gone for a ride. Wanted to be alone, think."

"All the saddle animals are there."

"When was she last seen?"

"In the Colonel's office when the others turned in, going over the Colonel's papers. I'd already offered to help but she declined."

"What about Jarvis?"

"Oh, he's no good. Nobody saw her go outside or anywhere and that's hard to understand. These blacks are always running round at night. Somebody should have seen her."

"Well," Sandy said, collecting himself, "she must be somewhere on the island. You go back and start to organize a general search. Every man, woman and child that can toddle. I'll be right over."

He would have got rid of Vinckers, to bring his mind to bear, reasoning faculties at work. Vinckers, he was convinced, must know what had happened. There was no other source of danger there to Isobel nor any possible motive for this disappearance. And Vinckers of course would have a perfect alibi. Dark thoughts surged into Sandy's mind. Black, sinister, devilish thoughts that had to do with diabolic evil, insistent impulses and recklessness of consequences the obedience to an imperative urge.

Vinckers went ashore and Sandy soon followed him. He found the two women pale and speechless. Jarvis vague and biting at his finger tips, the picture of unregeneracy, indecency, fatality.

Hester said, "I'm badly scared Mr. Crewe and I don't frighten easily." She corroborated Vinckers' report of his having gone early to bed and the other two following about an hour later. Hester and Vinckers occupied the same room on the upper floor, the younger Carlton's opposite. Vinckers had been snoring, they said, until Hester roused him a little.

Flavia had been wakeful and said that for hours it had seemed to her she had lain sleepless and listened to Vinckers snoring across the corridor.

"I heard Isobel, too, for quite a while, when she'd get up down below or move about. The office is under our room."

DESIRABLE RECIPES

How to Boil Rice

Many cooks find it difficult to boil rice so that the grains stay whole. One secret is to use plenty of water and don't overcook.

Have two quarts of actively boiling water ready in a saucepan. Add three tablespoons salt, or for a small quantity, allow two teaspoons of salt for each cup of washed rice. Slowly pour in the washed rice, so that the boiling does not stop. When the rice is all in, reduce heat slightly. Cook uncovered.

After 12 minutes boiling, test a few grains for softness. When the rice is soft, but still firm, drain in a colander, and run hot water through the rice to remove loose starch and separate the grains. Cover with a linen towel and place colander over steaming water on the back of the stove, or place in a warm oven for a short time, until rice becomes fluffy and dry.

One cup of uncooked rice yields about three cups of boiled rice. Rice cooked by this method may be prepared in the morning and reheated over hot water for the evening dinner. It is excellent with gravies and stews.

Irish Shortbread

Even though March 17 is past, this recipe direct from Ireland should be welcome. The recipe makes a large quantity and may be halved for the average family.

One cup shortening, one cup sugar, one-half cup whole, blanched almonds, four cups flour, two tablespoons finely chopped almonds.

Cream shortening and sugar. Work in the flour and the chopped almonds. Press in a thin layer on a cookie sheet. Cover with the whole almonds and bake in a slow oven 10 minutes. Remove from the oven, and cut in strips. Return to the oven and continue baking until all the cookies (or shortbread) are evenly browned.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)
HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—At the moment we're biting our tongue and trying to concentrate hard on something else to keep from telling about the clothes we are doing for Kay Francis in "First Lady." Not one word will we say about it until the picture is previewed, but we'll stir up your curiosity by saying they are the most revolutionary things we've ever done for the screen.

To concentrate on something else—the new trend in feminine fashions is to appeal to the men. Men don't like their ladies in black so it is rapidly losing ground as the first color choice. The softer shades of beige and grey are coming to the fore. A large percentage of the street things we did for Bette Davis and Jane Bryan in "Kid Galahad" reflect this color preference. Most of their things also have a slightly more rounded shoulderline to conform to the more feminine trend and, of course, the shorter skirts are definitely more appealing to the male.

The lavish use of net and lace strike a softer note than has been sounded for some time. One of the high novelties in net is a dinner dress we did for Joan Blondell in a shadowy clan plaid. The finely pleated skirt is banded at the hemline with a shade of blue in the plaid.

Although many dresses this year are made of two and three shades of pastel laces, personally I am not partial to lace in anything but the neutral tones. Black and white is always a good combination in lace and especially so when used as Gloria Holden does it with a black floor length cape of lace over a Chantilly gown.

Tulle and marquisettes are especially good for the younger brigade and are rich in old-time romance. A white tulle dress we did for Anita Louise to wear to a recent important social occasion had twelve yards of material in the skirt alone. In a mauve shade, it was quite the height of femininity when accented with a corsage of Parma violets.

Although materials in the evening mode would seem to indicate a return to popularity of the clinging vine appearance, there is still a certain amount of dash in the trend. The high neckline gives way to a true décolletage while many of the demure looking lace berthas can be pulled over the coignure to form a perky hood.

What Would You Do If There Were No CLASSIFIED WANT ADS?

Can you imagine? Can you visualize . . . a newspaper without Classified Want Ads? You've lost your purse with your week's earnings in it . . . How are you going to find it? You want to rent a room, a house, an apartment . . . you want to buy or sell a Used Car, a second-hand stove . . . you want to find a job . . . HOW ARE YOU GOING TO DO IT? Your problems are solved through the Want-Ads.

When newspapers, several hundred years ago, began printing notices of one sort or another, they were all together in an appointed column. But the increasing numbers of these small ads forced a change. Ads similar to purpose and intent were assembled under one head.

For example, the ads of all those wanting to sell something were set following one another. Such was the beginning of a systematic grouping. The ads were "classified."

So today the want ad section is divided into definite groups with accompanying sub-heads. Some of these classifications come to mind: Public Notices group—Employment group—Automotive group—Real Estate group—and each group further divided for the mutual aid of reader and advertiser alike.

HIGH SCHOOL NINE WINS OVER LANGHORNE, 3-0

By Louis Tomlinson

LANGHORNE, Apr. 17—Bill Gallagher, ace of the Cardinal hurling staff, held the Red and Blue of Langhorne in the palm of his hand yesterday as he fanned 10 opposing batters, allowed only three hits and shut out the Redskins, 3-0, in the opening contest of the Lower Bucks League. It was a typical Bristol-Langhorne game with Gallagher and Bill McCahan, ace of the losers' staff, hooking up in a fine mound duel.

Gallagher, however, bested McCahan in the match. He gave only one walk and hit one batter besides striking out 10 and giving up only three hits. McCahan, on the other hand, struck out eight, walked five, and was found for four hits. Both hurlers struck out the side in one inning, and had one strike-out in every inning but one. The Bristol ace had his big inning in the second frame while McCahan had an equally as good an inning in the first canto. Walt Carter went in to relieve McCahan in the seventh after the latter contracted a sore arm. Rowe went in at right, Bratby moved over to center, and the husky center fielder took up the hurling duties.

Hits were few and far between with Charlie "Chuck" Klein being the only stickmen to be able to solve opposing pitching for more than one blow. Both of his hits were singles and came in the second and fourth frames. Bill McCahan was the only other Langhorne hitter able to touch Gallagher for a safe wallop, his coming in the fourth canto, a single also.

BENSALEM DEFEATS NEWTOWN, 8 TO 7

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Apr. 17—A sound hit to right field, with three men on base, by Pat McGahan, of Bensalem, broke up a thrilling Lower Bucks County League ball game with Newtown yesterday. The final score was 8 to 7 in Bensalem's favor. Joe Cahill pitched a good game but was relieved in the seventh inning by Hotie Robinson.

Bill Wiggins, Newtown's hurler, did a commendable job in holding Bensalem all through the game. Newtown led off with one run in the third. This was duplicated by Bensalem. Bensalem gathered up four in the fourth inning to Newtown's zero. The fifth remained scoreless. Each team returned to get two in the sixth. With the game apparently sealed for Bensalem, Newtown rallied for four in the seventh. In the eighth Adams scored on McGahan's hit to win the game for Bensalem.

SUNDAY FISHING LEGAL

Pennsylvania anglers may fish tomorrow.

Governor Earle signed Wednesday—on the eve of the trout season—the bill permitting the sport on Sabbath. It passed the House, 143 to 55 and the Senate, 31 to 15.

Pennsylvania was the last State in the union to prohibit Sunday fishing.

Through many sessions, bills to amend the act which dated back to the blue law were rejected. The successful measure was sponsored by Mahlon Larue, Berks, and A. K. Robinson, Allegheny.

All rules and regulations applicable to week day fishing in the inland waters of the State apply to Sunday angling. In addition a Sunday fisherman must obtain the consent of the owners of the water in which he would fish or a permit from owners of land contiguous to the stream or lake.
